80' Bases - allows for good transition from LL base distance & prep for high school play -Enables players to continue with development of the various infield and outfield positions played in Little League on larger size field, but not high school size field	90' Bases - substantial increase in base path distance from Little League- Now at high school level base distance changes player's positions/abilities due to increased distance for infield catching, throwing and running the bases
54' 6" pitching distance enables pitchers to comfortably develop speed, accuracy and new pitches effectively and without risk to physical strains and or injuries. Holding base runners is a skill developed with high chance of success due to base distance. Finally, hitting skills develop quicker due to pitching distance, swing mechanics, limit on bat size and improved focus/tracking ball.	60' pitching eliminates pitchers whose skill, speed, accuracy and pitch types are truly developing. Added 6 feet pressures pitchers and in some cases, requires more fastballs to be thrown. Next, holding base runners becomes very challenging due to increased base distance. Finally, hitting skills develop slower due to swing timing requirements and focus on ball-bat sizes and swing mechanics become even more important.
